FARM TO SCHOOL: FRESH FOOD, HEALTHY MEALS, AND A STRONG COMMUNITY

In our school cafeteria, we believe in serving more than just meals—we contribute to a healthy and vibrant community. We are proud to be a part of the farm-to-school movement, connecting students with fresh, locally grown foods through the meals we serve. What makes farm-to-school great?

SUPPORTING LOCAL FARMERS & BUILDING COMMUNITY

• When we choose local farms, we're not just getting fresh food – we're supporting our community too! By buying from nearby farmers, we get to know the farmers who grow our food and gain new appreciation for their hard work, while giving them a helping hand financially and boosting our local economy. The money we spend on these farm products stays right here in our community.

LEARNING ABOUT SUSTAINABILITY • Farm-to-school is not just about food; it's also about learning how to best care for our planet. By keeping the miles food travels from the farm to our lunch trays, we're helping support a healthy environment.

FRESH AND TASTY MEALS • With farm-to-school, we're bringing in fresh fruits, veggies, and other farm products straight from local farms to our cafeteria meals. These foods are harvested at just the right time and are packed with nutrients that support growth and well-being.

Let's celebrate the farm-to-school program and the positive changes it brings to our school meals and community.

Together, we can enjoy fresh, tasty food on our lunch trays while supporting our local farmers and learning about sustainable growing practices.
